VIRTUOUS MEN

Men do not work because they are virtuous, but are virtuous because they work. The vices man has invented are the vices of idleness. Man is most respectable while sweating for his bread, not because sweating is a virtue, but because idleness gets him into mischief. Remove the necessity that now drives men to labor and within a year the devil could annex the world without the formality of a plebiscite.—G. H. Lorimer in Saturday Evening Post.

The work of wrecking the old building just south of the Verona State Bank was speeded up Tuesday afternoon when a few block and tackle was hitched to the south wall and a number of volunteers got hold the rope and pulled. The building came down with a crash that could be heard a long way and thus much time was saved. We understand that T. J. Miller will erect a business block in the space vacated which will be a fine improvement and a great help to the appearance of main street.—Verona Advocate.

For the past twenty years or more forward looking citizens interested in the best welfare of this great State, have been working for a new State constitution. There are persons today expressing themselves as being opposed to revising the constitution who have not given the present constitution two hours serious and careful study in ten years. Opponents to progress we always have had and always will have and usually the fellow who knows the least about a proposition and will not study to inform himself does the most kicking.—Cassville Republican.

THE KEY THAT UNLOCKS THE DOOR TO LONG LIVING

The men of eighty-five and ninety years of age are not the rotund, well-fed, but thin, spare men, who live on a slender diet. Be as careful as he will, however, a man past middle age will occasionally eat too much or of some article of food not suited to his constitution, causing indigestion or constipation and will need a dose of Chamberlain's Tablets to move his bowels and invigorate his stomach. When this is done, there is no reason why the average man should not live to a ripe old age.
